OBITUARIES

— BY THE —

CLAY COUNTY ADVOCATE

W. T. CARDER, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER

FOREWORD

During a period of ten months, beginning October 1, 1929, to August 31, 1930, the Clay County Advocate printed as a special feature, pictures and biographical sketches of business men of Clay City. It was planned at the beginning that after the completion of this series, the pictures and biographies would be reproduced in book form as a means of preservation.

In addition this little book contains reproductions of the obituaries published in the Advocate from October 1, 1929, to October 1, 1930, also a brief history of Maysville and Clay City, in the early days and a list of the various other businesses in Clay City on November 1, 1930, who were not featured in the picture pages of the Advocate.

Yours truly,

Wm. T. Carder,

CLAY COUNTY'S FIRST COUNTY SEAT

Clay county was created by an act of the legislature, December 23, 1824.

James Bird, Israel Jennings and John H. Morris were appointed commissioners to locate the county seat, and were requested to meet at the home of John McCawley.

The courts were to meet at the house of John McCawley.

An election was held at McCawley's on the third Monday in February, 1824, and elected a sheriff, coroner and three county commissioners.

On Tuesday, the 8th day of March, 1825, at the house of John McCawley, assembled the first county commissioners' court for the new county of Clay. They were John H. Lacy, Wm. Lewis and Samuel G. Weatherspoon.

Wm. C. Osborn, appointed county clerk by the commissioners, and the first paper put in the court's records was his commission as clerk, bearing the date of February 23, 1825.

The appointment of Mathias Meisenheimer, the first road supervisor for the road leading from John McCawley's bridge to the Marion county line, and John McCawley, supervisor of the Vincennes and St. Louis road, completed the first day's work in the first court in Clay county.

In the second day's court, Daniel May, William Lewis, John McCawley, James Nelson, Andrew Evans, Thomas Elliott, Mathias

Meisenheimer, Isaac Elliott and Thomas Nichols were granted a "tavern license" for the term of one year, each paying a fee of $2.50 and were governed by the following rates:

For keeping horse one night	37 ½ c
Lodging	12 ½ c
Supper	25 c
Brexfast	25 c
Dinner	37 ½ c
Horse Feed	12 ½ c
One quart whiskey	25 c
One pint whiskey	18 ¾ c
One gill whiskey	6 ¼ c

HUBBARDSVILLE FIRST COUNTY SEAT

Daniel May donated 20 acres of land to the county. Daniel McCall who was appointed surveyor, was ordered to lay off and plot the new town on May's donation. May was authorized to build the first court house to be erected on the public square. The little county seat, which had borne the name of Hubbardsville from March, 1825, to June of that year, now was named Maysville, in honor of Daniel May, who donated the ground and built the first court house which with additions built to it is standing today and occupied by D. N. Soules.

The spring term of court in 1841 was the last held at the old county seat, the fall term was held at the new and present county seat, Louisville, in rented rooms, pending the completion of the new court house.

Clay County Advocate Office

The Advocate office pictured, recalls a Wednesday afternoon as the writer was making ready to go on the press for the weekly paper and Mrs. Carder awaiting to contribute her part in the publication.

The other 19 members of this feature have had someone else to speak for them in this column, but I am having to speak for myself and I will frankly acknowledge, first, that I was born in East Pixley township, Clay county, Illinois, 'way back in 1876, October 1. I was reared on a farm, married in 1897, left the farming to others one year following. Came to Clay City, March, 1900, following painting and paperhanging until 1907, when I engaged in the restaurant with F. M. Brissenden. Sold my interests to Mr. Brissenden in 1917 and after spending three months in Davenport, Iowa, returned to Clay City, engaging in various pursuits of life until January, 1921, when I bought of J. C. Sanders the Advocate equipment which had been lying dormant for 28 months, and in the nine years and six months I have stood every week at the old press and ground out the Advocates, with the exception of one week when I was fortunate enough to be able to take a vacation of ten days in July, 1927.

Mrs. Carder, whose age I had better not mention without her permission, supplies the extra help at the office, especially on press day. Until a few years ago our paper was hand set and until we changed to machine composition she assisted in the composition work. I must not forget to mention that our daughter, Helen, too, is pressed into service on press days—she is 15; I'm not afraid to tell her age.

The Clay County Advocate was established in 1889 by a corporation of Clay City business men— one of these, C. D. Duff, still remaining in business in Clay City. Later the business was sold and resold several times, even operation was suspended a number of times.

I want to thank the business men and our patrons for making it possible to re-establish the operation of the Advocate and its tenth year continuance, but I would like to have another vacation before the weather gets too hot.

C. D. Duff

We are really joyful of the opportunity and for the privilege at this time of being able to feature on this page this man, Mr. C. D. Duff, the oldest in business of any business man now in Clay City, because we know that he has many absent friends who get this paper who will especially appreciate seeing his picture as he is today.

C. D. Duff was born in Old Maysville, Illinois, October 16, 1855. After the death of his father, he, then six months old, returned with his mother to Tennessee, in a covered wagon, where he lived until 21 years of age.

He then returned to Clay City and was employed as a store clerk by two uncles, R. E. and J. N. Duff. After the death of R. E. Duff in 1877, J. N. Duff and C. D. Duff continued the business under the firm name of J. N. Duff & Company until 1888 when C. D. Duff sold his interest in the store and soon thereafter entered into business with J. T. Evans & Company. In 1907 Dr. J. T. Evans sold his interest in the business to his son, C. D. Evans, and the firm's name was changed to Duff & Evans, which continued business until 1911 when C. D. Evans sold his interest to John W. Duff, since which time the business has been conducted under the firm name of C. D. & J. W. Duff, father and son, and includes a second son, Carroll Duff.

When Mr. Duff first became a member of the firm of J. T. Evans & Company, they were conducting a general mercantile store. A while before Mr. Evans sold out they had changed to buying grain, seeds, etc., and selling farm machinery, harness and other items along that line.

Today, Mr. Duff, his sons, Wallace and Carroll, through their courtesy, honorable and upright dealing with the public have an established business sufficient to reward them for their efforts, and at the same time they are rendering a most valuable service to the community, continuing the handling of grain, seeds, hay, feeds of all kinds, especially for poultry, and carrying a good line of harness, wire fencing, nails, etc.—really a farm supply store and located at the same spot occupied by J. T. Evans & Company years ago.

Mr. Duff has served several terms as a member of the village council, several years and until about three years ago as secretary of the Building & Loan Association. He is interested extensively in farming and stock raising and heartily enjoys meeting the farmers in the store where a comfortable chair is always offered the patrons and friends and also a hearty welcome extended to all.

A. Hunley

Archibald Hunley, subject of this sketch, is well known over Clay county, as well as are very few others.

He was born in Clay City where Crackel & Sons' garage is now located, December 23, 1874. He spent his early life on the farm near Clay City. In 1901 he was appointed guard at the Southern Illinois Penitentiary where he served under Governor Richard Yates a few months over four years. Returning to Clay City and again entering the farming game in 1905. He pursued this vocation until the year of 1917 when he purchased the J. A. Rodgers grocery store, where he—let us pause right here to state that now and hereinafter when we refer to his grocery business it's in his name only, because his wife, Lil, as she is commonly known, is the whole thing in this grocery business and her picture should have appeared beside his but she would not consent. Now, we back up to say he is still conducting a thriving grocery and meat market, in the old building occupied in the 90s by the post office.

Arch is more interested in his farms and stock raising; this is why he leaves the store business entirely to Mrs. Hunley. He takes care of it at times while she goes to her meals a few steps away, providing she is absent but a minute or two—he'll leave. He would rather face a zero blizzard and go to his slaughter house and dress a hog than to count a dozen of eggs.

Mr. Hunley has served his township as supervisor five two-year terms and was again elected last spring for his sixth. However, politics betrayed him back several years ago defeating him once in the primary and once in the general election for sheriff. Since then the office has been tendered him by his party with almost positive assurance of his election and he said NO.

There is no better hearted man than Arch. His kindness and the favors he has extended to the needy, his sympathetic disposition toward those who are less fortunate than he has made him many, many friends, not only around among his home people but all over the county and elsewhere where he is known.

But "Lil" runs the grocery store.

"Jiggs"

We are confronted with a duality in dealing with the subject of this sketch—first is that of "Jiggs" a dual of Frank M. Brissenden and is not to be considered in the sketch except in furnishing the near physical likeness on paper. No camera, so far, has been able to withstand the exposure of the principal subject, consequently his dual was employed to display the physical features of our subject, Mr. Brissenden.

Frank M. Brissenden, born January 21, 1874, on a farm two miles southeast of Clay City where Lem Glasco now resides. When one year of age his parents moved to their new home in Old Maysville, a brick house now occupied by Mr. Wattles. After reaching manhood he entered the lumber business with his father, Morris Brissenden, between the years of 1890-1894. The lumber business was sold out in 1902 and Frank traveled for a year or two for the International Harvester Co., then he moved to St. Louis where he was employed with an express company for three years.

Returning to Clay City in 1906 and in June, 1907, he and Wm. T. Carder purchased the Mills Cafe. After ten years of the most congenial and satisfactory partnership Mr. Brissenden purchased the interest of his partner in August, 1917, and today he is able to slice the ham, though 22 years have been added to his age, as he could fifteen years ago.

Every soul, even a child who is large enough to walk alone and has ever met Mr. Brissenden, know him, not as Mr. Brissenden, but "Jiggs," and many people in neighboring towns know him as "Jiggs," who really are not able to tell you his real name. We are going to tell you in another item elsewhere how he inherited the name "Jiggs."

W. H. Banker

W. H. Banker was born in Wayne county, January 22, 1884, came to Clay City in 1911 and engaged in the hardware business in the room now occupied by the Advocate, later moving to the room occupied now by Wiltsey & Wiltsey . In 1918 he sold out and was employed with the Clay City Lumber & Hardware Co. until October, 1926, when he became a partner with R. E. Duff in the grocery business. Mr. Duff sold his interests to Henry Weiler, March, 1929, and since, the firm has been Banker & Weiler, located in the south room of the Odd Fellows building.

Herschel has associated with the public in a business way for the past eighteen years and because of his congeniality, courtesy and square dealing he has continuously made new friends—everybody likes Herschel.

When everybody you meet is wearing a frown and seem unfriendly, try Herschel; he'll be smiling.

Henry Weiler

Henry Weiler was born on a farm northwest of Clay City, October 12, 1905, came to Clay City with his parents in 1923 and attended the Clay City schools.

After serving Murvins Bros. as clerk in their store here for two years he resigned his position last March and entered into the grocery business for himself with W. H. Banker, buying out the interest of R. E. Duff.

Henry, whose occupation prior to clerking in a store was assisting his father in looking after the farm's products. In entering the business game he found it one of pleasure to him and that feature, naturally, is responsible to a certain degree in developing friendship between him and those he served. His desire to be of more service, possibly was partially responsible for his desire to enter into business for himself where he could apply himself in his own way.

Wm. L. Holman

A native of Clay City and a life long citizen is the subject in our sketch this week. You already know that it is William L. Holman. He was born in Clay City, May 8, 1879. "Bill" brought his school work to a close early in life as many of us did in those days, and entered the milling business with his father, Samuel Holman, at the age of 15. In the year 1907 his father retired from the mill and "Bill" assumed full charge until the flourishing mills in this section of Illinois began to discontinue grinding wheat. He then continued at the old stand conducting practically the same kind of business as before except the grinding of wheat. Later he branched out into the wholesale business adding many items to his line and in 1925 he erected a large building on Main street on the corner just north of the B. & O. depot in order to be able to take care of his growing business. The old mill site was then abandoned and is still standing with most of the old milling machinery therein.

Mr. Holman handles an extensive line of flour and other foods, poultry feed, stock feed and coal. His trade reaches out 100 miles from Clay City and orders are delivered by truck. "Bill's Best," a hard wheat flour of his own brand, has become a favorite throughout this vast radius of his trade territory.

Here is a good place to mention that "Billy" took a vacation in the year of 1898 and went over to Cuba and helped settle some trouble then existing between the United States and Spain, under the orders of army service.

"Billy" and his worthy companion, besides their comfortable home, enjoy that great pleasure of a married son with two little girls. The son, Harold, is all except a partner in name in his father's business.

"Bill" is one of the Clay City Booster Club and an earnest worker in the church. And don't think he is not for Clay City.

C. M. Keith

Charles M. Keith, the subject of this sketch, was born November 28, 1903, at Rinard, Illinois. His father, Earl Keith, who is well known throughout this community as an extensive land owner and stock raiser naturally brought to Charles a knowledge of farming, along with his school education, which was completed at the Millikin University at Decatur, Illinois, 1922-1926, where he graduated in commerce and finance with B. S. degree, after he had graduated from the Flora high school with the class of 1922.

After his high school and university work was completed he accepted employment with the Sexton Manufacturing Company at Flora as manager of order department, remaining with the company a'out a year when he accepted a position with a chain store company as manager of one of their stores in Flora. He had only served this company one year when he came to Clay City in June, 1929, and took charge, as manager, of the Clay City Lumber & Hardware Company, the business formerly owned by a number of stockholders and purchased by Earl Keith, in 1928.

Mr. Keith, upon entering into the new line of business here, began at once to exercise his business ability and talent, with the assistance of his able clerk, Will Bradley, who had had previous experience in the line of merchandise handled by the company, in building up the business. He began at once letting the people know that they had the goods, the price and would render the service—he believes in advertising. The store room was remodeled, brightened up with paint, stock rearranged and displayed and it seems that Mr. Keith (and Bill, for Bill is always found busy in adding to the appearance of the store and the displaying of light as well as heavy hardware in such a manner that it is really attractive) have been untiring in their efforts to render a service that their patrons would really appreciate and long remember.

Kenneth Conour

Kenneth Conour, who is the subject of this sketch and pictured above has been one of Clay City's industrious business men for the past 16 years, coming here from Sumner, Illinois, in the year of 1914.

He was born May 12, 1894, at Sumner, Illinois, and after reaching an age of usefulness he found employment in the poultry business with J. M. Prather, and it was there in Sumner he learned the poultry business, which, at that time including the dressing of poultry and the packing of dressed poultry.

In 1914 Mr. Conour and Gene Dale, forming a partnership, came to Clay City and bought out the J. M. Prather branch poultry business here and after about six months Mr. Conour bought his partner's interests and has continued the business ever since in the name of K. Conour Produce Company.

Mr. Conour, no doubt, is alone responsible for putting Clay City on the map as one of the best poultry and egg markets in this section of the country. Back at the time he came here, merchants who bought poultry and eggs, shipped independently. Later it was found that independent shipping was added expense in handling country produce and the producer had to pay in the end. Mr. Conour made it possible to reduce the shipping expense by wholesale buying and selling, taking the produce from the buyers not only in Clay City but from the entire community and inland towns.

Too, "Red," as he is commonly known, has maintained a market for a varied line of produce, including junk of all kinds—old iron, rags, metals, and green hides. Many times having car loads of old iron piled up around on his premises before loading out.

He has prospered, he has paid good prices and after sixteen years of buying the various lines of produce coming in from all sources he holds and has maintained a reputation of square dealing with his patrons—honest weights, good prices—good checks has done this.

Clay City Banking Co.

The Clay City Banking Company bank was organized July 2, 1892, with a capital stock of $10,000, surplus $2,000, with J. T. Evans, president; Is Mills, vice president; F. M. Chaffin, cashier, and S. S. Gill, J. T. Evans, C. W. Hopkins, Is Mills and F. M. Chaffin, directors. The bank's present vice president and cashier became an associate as bookkeeper a few months later. Its first home was a small frame building on South Main street, now used for a voting place.

In 1894 a two story brick building was erected nearer the center of the business district which they occupied until the year 1910 when again they moved into their new building pictured above.

Its present officers are C. W. Hopkins, president; J. E. Gibbs, vice president and cashier; C. H. Bones, assistant cashier, and Chas. L. Hopkins, bookkeeper. Directors, C. W. Hopkins, John Gill, C. D. Duff, J. E. Gibbs and A. H. Duff. Capital and surplus over $70,000.00.

W. G. Murvin

W. G. Murvin was born October 4, 1891, at Ingraham, Illinois. When he was two years of age his parents moved to Bible Grove and there he grew to manhood, assisting his father in farming. At the age of 23, in the year of 1914, he accompanied his parents back to Ingraham, where he and a brother, J. G., with their father entered into the general mercantile business under the firm name of J. R. Murvin & Sons, in the old Osman Pixley stand where, at one time, many years ago, sixty or more, was the site of the largest retail general store in the county.

In 1923 the father retired from business and W. G. Murvin, the subject of this sketch, and his brother, J. G., forming the firm of Murvin Brothers, continued the business until 1926 when they decided to enlarge their business and opened a store in Clay City, November 13, 1926, with W. G. Murvin, manager, his brother continuing with the store at Ingraham. On January 1, 1929, they moved the Ingraham store to West Salem, Illinois.

At this time the store at West Salem is managed by J. G. Murvin and W. G. Murvin in charge of the store in Clay City, both jointly owned by the two and as Murvin Bros.

Necessarily we mention both W. G. and J. G. at this time in stating that the business of J. R. Murvin & Sons and Murvin Bros. have throughout their business career been a success—they work cooperatively, of course, and both possess business qualities that have been an asset both to themselves and the public. They believe in having what the people want, and both believe in conveying the news to the public in the way of advertising.

The Murvin Bros. occupy the Coggan building here and carry a general line of merchandise from toothpicks and pins to farm fencing and room rugs.

As we go along in life we must advance—progress a little each year, and each year Murvin's store has striven to do this to the best of its ability. Founded with the objective of giving the people of Clay City and their many customers value and service, they have tried to give a little bit more of these two things each year. Their success in this attempt has been marked in the past and it will be in the future.

R. E. Duff

You've all wondered who would be next. Here he is. Robert Earl Duff, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Duff. Mr. Duff, now deceased, was a pioneer business man of Clay City.

The subject of this sketch was born October 5, 1886, on East Second street, where his mother now resides. Earl is a comparatively young man and has no lengthy biography but he has been active since completing his education in the Clay City schools.

After several years of clerkship in the stores of Clay City, in 1923 he formed a partnership with John D. Bones, now deceased, in the real estate business. He was also elected in that year as secretary of the Clay City Building, Loan & Homestead Association. He also was elected at this time as supervisor of Clay City township and was re-elected supervisor in 1925, serving two terms with the credit of furnishing the tax payers of Clay county with the long form tax receipts and moneys being paid into the treasury that had been forgotten or misplaced by some of the county officials. He was chairman of the board in his last term. He refused a place on the ticket in 1929 which meant his reelection again to this office.

In 1926 Mr. Duff and W. H. Banker purchased a grocery store, located in the south room of the I. O. O. F. building, from J. E. Brissenden. In March, 1929, Mr. Duff sold his interest to Henry Weiler. Since that time Mr. Duff has maintained an office at the store where he handles the business of the Building & Loan, his real estate and insurance.

Earl is now serving not his first term as one of the village councilmen. He is active and ready at all times to do his part in any civic affair that comes up. He has a family, three children all in school, owns his home and is president of the Clay City Booster Club.

Earl is well liked and quite congenial among his fellow citizens, and our little booklet, which we will issue within a few months and which will be preserved by hundreds of our readers, will not be able to mention all the good that there is in Robert because there is a lot that is to come and cannot be predicted at this time.

F. T. Banker

Francis Titus Banker, subject of this sketch, was born in Indiana, May 7, 1856, came to Clay county about the year of 1859, the family residing near Clay City for a short time, then moving to Zif township in Wayne county where, a little later his father conducted a store and was postmaster at Zif for many years.

Francis T. is a carpenter by trade, which he followed for many years.

In the year of 1912 he purchased the Brock House in Clay City, moved his family here and has continued to serve the public with boarding house and hotel accommodations these past seventeen years.

Upon taking charge of the hotel business, he changed the name to "The Banker House." He began improving, remodeling and has continually improved the building and surroundings until it is one of the best kept-up places in Clay City, and a most home-like place to stop for a meal or a month—he and his good wife specialize in making it just so.

Mr. Banker is quite ingenious and has improved the idle time from the hotel business in installing light machinery in what he calls his work shop, power drive for lathes, band and scroll saws, and other equipment which he uses in repairing furniture, cabinet building, etc. He is very neat with this line of work; he enjoys it, and he does it during his leisure from his duties at the house.

Possibly there is no one living who has not an enemy but if this man has one we've never heard of it. His character is such that the preceding remark is due him while he is living. He has reared a fine family of six children, all of whom are now in homes of their own. His greatest pleasure now is to have these children come to his home bringing the grandchildren for a visit with him and his home companion.

Mr. Banker is a member of the Clay City Booster Club and is for Clay City.

Weiler's Service Station

Weiler's Service Station is located at the Y in Clay City, where Route 12 leaves Main street, turning eastward, was built and is owned and operated by Everett Weiler who will be seen standing in the foreground.

Older people will remember this location as the Miller Lumber yard site, years ago.

In the year 1924, after the state had built Route 12 through Clay City, which caused some changes and relocating some of the buildings on this corner, Mr. Weiler planned and was the chief mechanic in erecting the building pictured, for a service station. He has never rested from making it more attractive each year and making his place one of service. It is one of the beauty spots of our little village and Mr. Weiler, it must be said right here, is always found at his post endeavoring to render prompt and adequate service. He has established a reputation of prompt service, square dealing and courtesy with strangers as well as with his most intimate friends.

Mr. Weiler was born in Clay county, about four miles south of Flora, August 9, 1899. Moved with his parents to a farm northeast of Flora, where they resided for a few years then located on what is now known as the Weiler farm, between Clay City and Flora, on Route 12, in 1917. In 1921 he was united in marriage to Miss Ruth Paden, of Clay City. Following his marriage he came to Clay City and entered into the hardware business which he conducted for three years and until he erected the building and engaged in serving the people as he is today.

Besides the Standard Oil products, Mr. Weiler handles at his station, tires, several items of accessories and has the agency for the Stewart-Warner radio.

Laota Doherty Banker

The subject of this sketch is a daughter of the late Stephen S. Doherty, who with a brother, Anthony Doherty, served Clay City and community as druggists from 1880 to the time of the former's death in 1926, excepting about three years from 1905 to 1908.

Mrs. Banker was born July 9, 1891, in Caly City and at the age of seven moved from here with her parents and after a year or so located in Murphysboro, Illinois, where she graduated in the Murphysboro high school in the year 1909. Her mother died while residing at Murphysboro and in 1918 she and her father returned to Clay City where he again entered the drug business and she assisted him as an apprentice.

At her father's death in February, 1926, she became the owner of the Doherty Drug Store and took up the study of pharmacy, passing the state board of examiners in January, 1929, and was granted a certificate and licensed a registered pharmacist.

To appreciate a comfortable rocker is to find it in another's home. If, in any other town, as large or twice the size of Clay City, could be found a drug store that would compare with our drug store in Clay City, it should be worthy of special note.

The store's fixtures, the display of the merchandise and window decorations makes it one of the beauty spots among Clay City businesses. Mrs. Banker has shared in awards in national contests in window decorations and displays.

For almost fifty years, with the exception of those mentioned above, this drug store has been owned by the Doherty family and today it retains the name, "Doherty Drug Store."

T. M. Wharf & Son

We are featuring this week in somewhat an unusual way, compared with features previously run in that the subject herein featured is a resident of Olney and is the only one represented in this Business Men's Review series of features, outside of resident businessmen. In a way, since Clay City has no monument works and T. M. Wharf & Son, of Olney, an old established firm having served the people of this community for about fifty years, were eligible to come in and share in these series of features and they gladly accepted the invitation.

The T. M. Wharf Monument Works was established in Olney about fifty years ago. Later, a son, Eugene, who grew up in the business with his father, became a partner, changing the firm name to T. M. Wharf & Son. "Gene," well known by many of our people throughout the community and at the prime of life in age is now leading in handling the business affairs of the business, and speaking rather personally and in plain English, to know him is to like him. (He would have us to deplete this if he knew it was going in, but it's true and we believe in "flowers for the worthy while living.")

"Gene" is a frequent visitor in Clay City; he has rendered service to hosts of people in this community and they are all satisfied customers—if they are not, it certainly is not his fault.

The Wharf Marble Works is located on the west side of the Illinois Central railroad tracks just one-half block north of Main street and we can assure anyone of a cordial welcome to visit Eugene there any time.

Burley Shock

Burley Shock, principal in this sketch, was born near Clay City, April 10, 1880. After finishing his schooling he began fighting life's battles dressing poultry for J. M. Prather under J. C. Mosser. At this he became quite proficient and worked several years at the business. He then went to work for Black & Duff in a grocery store, the store later changing hands three or four times and Burley always went in the deal until February 20, 1926, when he with his son, Frank, went into the grocery business for themselves and are now located in the McCawley building on South Main street, and enjoying their share of the grocery business.

Burley developed a knowledge of furs and during the fur season he buys up practically all the furs caught and sold in the community. He knows quality in furs and he has established a reputation of dealing fairly with his fur patrons who many times must depend upon the buyers fairness in selling fur.

Frank Shock

Frank Shock, the son and a partner in the grocery business, was born February 2, 1904, in Clay City, and like his father, with the exception of about three years when he had employment with the American Steel Foundry in East St. Louis, has continuously lived in Clay City. He went to St. Louis directly after finishing school and almost immediately after his return home entered the grocery business with his father in February, 1926.

For the benefit of anyone who might be interested in knowing, we might state here that Frank isn't married, except to his place of business, and not quite so in that case because Frank enjoys base ball and is frequently called upon by some neighboring town ball clubs to help them win a game and he is able to put up his part of a good game, too.

Both he and his father are members of the Clay City Booster Club and are boosters for their home town.

F. M. Blessing

Frank M. Blessing, featured this week on the left with his son, John Leonard, on the right, was born in Clay City, April 1, 1882, and is the only surviving son of the late Leonard Blessing, a pioneer merchant of Clay City.

Frank, after completing the school course in Clay City took a business course in the Barnes Business College in Flora. His business pursuits in life began when he entered into the truss hoop business, later that of making barrels. After disposing of these businesses and the town putting in an electric light plant he entered in the electric supply and wiring business which he followed until Clay City had her first picture show and he was the promoter of that, then called the Nickelodeon, which he disposed of later and entered into the garage business in 1912, also establishing the first automobile agency in Clay City, selling the Ford automobile which he handled for a year or so, changing to the Dodge and for the past several years he has had the Buick agency and service.

agency Mr. Blessing is conducting a garage, offering service in every way to the auto owner including storage. Besides, he has the agency for the famous Goodyear tires, General Electric Frigidaire, and the Kolster radio. His business is located on the corner where his father did business for years, the building being rebuilt after the big fire in 1906 and is among the best in Clay City.

Frank has served several years as one of the village councilmen and is a member of the present board. He is a member of the Booster Club and a booster always.

JOHN LEONARD BLESSING

John Leonard Blessing, son of Frank M., was born September 27, 1909, in Clay City. After completing the third year high school here he graduated from the Harter Township high school at Flora with the class of 1928. After his graduation he became associated with his father in the garage business, where he at this time, will be found offering his services in the various branches of the business to the public.

Frank Levitt

Frank Levitt, member of the firm of Levitt & Easley, was born January 6, 1878, about three miles east of Sailor Springs at Old Gate-wood (Bucktown), in Pixley town-ship. He was reared on a farm and after he married he continued farming in the same community in which he was reared until he came with his family to Clay City in September, 1924.

A year or so before moving to Clay City he entered into the flour and feed business, as a side line, at Sailor Springs. Desiring to enter the business more extensively he moved his business to Clay City and retired from the farm. Soon after moving here he erected a store room and warehouse on West First street, near the Banker House, better known to some as the Brock House, facing the rail-road, where he has conducted the flour, feed and coal business ever since. Last October he accepted the partnership of Glenn R. Easley in the coal business.

Mr. Levitt is for the things that go to help make Clay City a better town and is a member of the Boosters Club.

Glenn R. Easley

Glenn R. Easley, member of the firm of Levitt & Easley, was born December 27, 1898, at Dix, Illinois, leaving there when six years of age, with his parents when they moved to Wayne City, Illinois. In 1911 the family came to Clay City, where his father, E. E. Easley, entered the furniture and undertak- ing business.

Glenn, after finishing his school work, enlisted in assisting his father at the store. In 1925 he bought out the ice business here and continued to help at the store at spare times. In 1928 he leased the Indian filling station on South Main street, at the old Bothwell & Hop- kins corner which he managed in conjunction with the ice business until October, 1929, when he quit the filling station and entered into the coal business with Mr. Levitt, retaining the ice business in con- nection.

No, he isn't married—naturally that assertion brings another ques- tion that many will ask: why? We don't know—he's old enough and don't seem to be a bit backward.

But, he's a booster for Clay City and a member of the Boosters Club and an-ice man.

Wm. Hiser

The picture an dwhat has already been said is enough for the truck, so we'll tell you more about "Bill."

He was born on a farm about two miles west of Sailor Springs, July 10, 1895. When about eight years old he moved with his parents to Sailor Springs where he continued to live until married, then he moved to a farm between Clay City and the Springs where he lived a year or so, then removed back to the Springs where he engaged in teaming.

On Thanksgiving day in 1924, while hunting the accidental discharge of a shotgun while his two hands were resting over the muzzle of the gun, tore away a part of each hand, leaving a thumb and little finger on one hand and three fingers on the other.

In 1925 he moved to Clay City and engaged in the taxi business, which he folloved and at the same time gradually drifted into the trucking business until recently, when he purchased his second truck, the one pictured and now he is applying himself to the trucking business almost exclusively, doing local and long distance hauling, trucking live stock to the market is the principal feature of the business.

After moving to Clay City Mr Hiser bought a home here and has done his part in helping Clay City to grow better by adding improvements about his place. He has prospered in spite of his handicap—he does not seem to recognize the fact that he has but parts of two hands.

He has a wife and two children, a son and a daughter and plenty of grit to see that they live comfortably.

Elmer E. Easley

Elmer E. Easley was born at Dix, Illinois, September 19, 1871, where he grew to manhood and entering into business, first, at the age of 24, as an employe in a furniture and undertaking business, which he bought out five years later and conducted same until 1902, and during these eight years he was postmaster at Dix from 1906 to 1902.

Having sold the business he went to Wayne City, where he bought a furniture and undertaking business which he conducted until 1911 when he sold out and moved to Virden, Illinois, where he lived four months before coming to Clay City in July, 1911.

Mr. Easley dropped into Clay City incidentally early in July, 1911. He knew not a living soul in the town but after looking it over he was impressed with the appearance and walked directly to the C. R. Mills & Sons furniture and undertaking establishment, asked to buy their business, they priced it and it was sold. Mr. Easley took charge on the Fourth of July, moving his family here in September following.

From the day he first arrived here and to this time he has been a constant booster for the town. In 1913 he was elected president of the village board and served two terms after which he served as a member of the board and again elected president which position he is still holding. He was elected in 1926, coroner of Clay county to fill vacancy. In 1928 he was re-elected coroner for a full term of four years. He was chosen on the school board about the year 1916 or '17 and has constantly and still serving the district as president of the board.

Last year he completed the erection of one of the finest store rooms in Clay City to which he moved his stock of furniture and undertaking supplies from the I. O. O. F. building which he had occupied and now a more up to date store of this kind may be found in much larger cities only.

His son, Gale, a licensed embalmer, is associated with him in the store and undertaking.

OBITUARIES

MAHLON H. PARKS

Mahlon H. Parks was born in Scott county, Indiana, December 6, 1861. Died in a hospital in Denver, Colorado, August 22, 1930. Age: 68 years, 8 months and 16 days.

On November 30, 1882, he was united in marriage with Leah C. Travis. To this union eleven children were born. One babe died in infancy in Illinois. Ten children are living, namely, Mrs. Edward Mosley, Cambridge, Nebraska; Mrs. C. R. Bunn, Denver, Colorado; Mrs. P. W. Johnson, Hutchinson, Kansas; Russell Parks, Cheyene, Wyoming; Dr. L. R. Parks, Grand Island, Nebraska; Raymond Parks, Roscoe Parks and Clifford Parks, all of Montezuma; Carrol Parks, Johnson, Kansas, and Mrs. E. E. McReynolds, Montezuma, Kansas.

The family moved to Oklahoma in 1906, where it remained for two years. Then the home was transferred to Hutchinson, Kansas. In 1912, the family came on west to Montezuma, where the residence has continued until this day. The wife and mother, Leah C. Parks, was called to her reward in February, 1927.

Mahlon H. Parks was one of the business pioneers in this country. His congenial and appreciative manner tended to cultivate not only the integrity of the business establishment but a multitude of loyal friends. As a citizen, he was of a progressive mind, deeply interested in the development of this western empire along lines that would insure its future. He was a friend of charities; a considerable help in starting the project of the new church building this year. He held membership in the Methodist church in Illinois. The expansion of the Montezuma school system found him an enthusiastic supporter of education. He was a tireless worker, giving himself completely to his task, as long as strength remained.

The past few years of steadily declining health were spent with an optimism, were spent cheerfully as he watched his children building their homes 'round about him. It is doubtful whether any of us will ever really know the depth of his family interest and affection. It was exceedingly great.

His slipping away at this time brings mourning to many; but our memory of him will be kindly, even as he spread kindness about him. He is survived by one sister, Mrs. Edward Wood, Indianapolis, Indiana; one brother, Clarence Parks, Lacon, Illinois; the ten children; nineteen grandchildren, and one great-grandchild; and an unusual number of friends.

Funeral services were held August 25, 1930, at the M. E. church, L. C. Gale in charge. Interment was made in the Fairview cemetery.

CLARA LEE SPILMAN

Clara Lee Spilman, daughter of Rev. Jonathan Edwards Spilman, D. D., and Eliza Taylor Spilman, was born in Covington, Kentucky, July 17, 1857. Her early life was spent in Kentucky. She finished her education at Sayre College, Lexington, specializing in music.

Her father moved his family to Salem, Illinois, in 1877, where she met Geo. Wm. Andrews, whom she married July 29, 1879. She leaves to mourn their loss, her husband; three children, Georgia Pritchett, of Springfield, Illinois; Edward S. Andrews, of Flora, Illinois; Jeanore Anderson, of Clay City, Illinois; four grandchildren, one brother, Lewis Spilman, of Knoxville, Tennessee; two sisters, Miss Anna Louise Spilman, of Flora, Illinois, and Mrs. Byrd Spilman Dewey, of Palm Beach, Florida.

Mrs. Andrews spent the greater part of her married life in Flora, Illinois, where she was an earnest and faithful member of the Presbyterian church. Later she with her husband moved to Mississippi, where she resided until failing health necessitated her being brought to the home of her daughter, Mrs. Anderson, at Clay City. In spite of all that loving care could do she passed away at 3:10 on the afternoon of July 5, 1930, aged 72 years, 11 months and 18 days.

She possessed a remarkable personality, meeting the duties of life squarely, sincerely and efficiently. Her thoughtfulness of others, her unselfishness and her willingness to serve was recognized by all. Her southern hospitality, her easy, charming and gracious manner won her a host of friends. In over fifty years of wedded life she proved herself a devoted wife and a loving mother. Asleep in Jesus! peaceful rest!
Whose waking is supremely blest;
No fear, no woe, shall dim the hour
That manifests the Savior's power.

There's a beautiful city that lies far away from the earth with its burden of tears,

Where the night never enters but shadowless day shines on through eternity's years.

And there all our sorrows shall fade as a dream, as we enter the country of rest,

While before us in heavenly beauty shall gleam the mansions pre-

Mrs. Pennybaker had been staying in Rosiclare with Kitty and Frank, and passed away while there. Her husband preceded her by seven years in passing to his reward.

The following incident is related by one of her daughters:

After becoming feeble she was very of singing, "God will take care of you."
